Tuesday 23 November8.00 am Virtual Conference Platform Live and Exhibition Opens*9.00 am SESSION 1 – DECOMMISSIONING: WHERE ARE WE NOW?

After a testing couple of years for the industry, this session will take stock of the current state of affairs for the UK's offshore energy industry. The session will discuss high level investment appetite, the energy transition and understand where decommissioning fits in a post-COVID world. This session is aimed at law-makers, regulators, market analysts, energy sector operators, supply chain businesses and finance communities and will appeal to those interested in understanding high level sentiment in the UK offshore industry.

10.15 am Break and Exhibition Visit10.45 am SESSION 2 – THE DECOMMISSIONING PICTURE

As the nation and industry continues to navigate through the pandemic there is a keen focus on maintaining activity. Last year the industry worked hard to deliver decommissioning with many removal projects continuing despite the challenging circumstances. However, not every project was delivered as planned and well decommissioning activity reduced. This session will look at the current decommissioning picture, giving an overview of upcoming activity, and highlighting initiatives to achieve a steady and sustainable decommissioning workload in the UK for operators and the supply chain.

The UK is an early mover in the global decommissioning market but we now have multiple basins shaping their own decommissioning markets and exporting lessons.

Session
Championed by

There are shared challenges around legislation, technology, business models and ways of working. There are also fundamental differences basin to basin, like regulation and fiscal policy, which could provide differing opportunity and risk profiles for companies operating different regions.

As each basin progress their own decommissioning liabilities, sharing and learning is vital for success.
